

Taking the temperature: Towards an NHS response to global warming

Contributed by nef
Monday, 30 July 2007

Taking the temperature: towards an NHS response to global warming written by nef for the NHS confederation says that the NHS faces a dual challenge. As well as taking action to reduce its own carbon emissions, as the lead agency responsible for public health, it needs to invest in preventive healthcare to strengthen the resilience of the population, as well as in treatment for the victims of a warmer, more variable climate.

http://www.neweconomics.org/gen/z_sys_PublicationDetail.aspx?pid=240