

Manufacturing and industrial policy

Contributed by Catalyst
Monday, 07 May 2007

The Labour government has been able to claim an impressive economic record since 1997. But a significant and growing concern has been the continuing erosion of the UK's manufacturing sector. This second edition of Catalyst's Talking Points series gives an overview of the importance of manufacturing in the UK economy and reviews the debate about what, if anything, should be done to reverse its decline.

<http://editiondesign.com/catalyst/pubs/talkingpoints02.doc>